Aviation specialist Chris Swanton has joined Clarus Capital as head of capital markets to lead the firm's coverage of institutional accounts with responsibility for sourcing and syndicating new equipment finance and leasing opportunities.

Swanton will be located in the firm's Boston headquarters.

He has more than 30 years of experience originating and structuring equipment financings for clients both domestically and cross-border.

Prior to joining Clarus, Swanton was a senior vice-president at SLR Equipment Finance. Previously, he worked for Citizens Bank where he was responsible for managing the asset finance sales team.

Swanton also previously served as president of equipment finance and leasing at Sovereign (now Santander) Bank for six years where he oversaw various teams, including the aircraft finance division.

He also held senior level roles at Key Bank and Bank of Tokyo (now MUFG).
