Singapore-based BOC Aviation has appointed Thomas Chandler as deputy chief operating officer (COO), with effect from 30 January.

In this newly created role, Chandler will oversee all legal and transaction management, technical and procurement departments of the company globally and will report to David Walton, deputy managing director and COO.

Chandler brings with him more than -25 years of experience in legal, banking and aviation sectors and joins from TUI Group, where he was managing director of fleet and asset management. He has worked with diverse international teams in procurement, leasing, financing and trading, and has closed numerous high value aircraft transactions in the process.

“We are delighted to announce Tom’s appointment as Deputy Chief Operating Officer and look forward to leveraging his experience and capabilities,” said Robert Martin, managing director and CEO. “Our ability to attract such top rate external talent confirms BOC Aviation as an employer of choice within the aviation sector.”

BOC Aviation has a fleet of 633 aircraft owned, managed and on order. Its owned and managed fleet was leased to 84 airlines in 39 countries and regions worldwide as at 31 December 2022.
